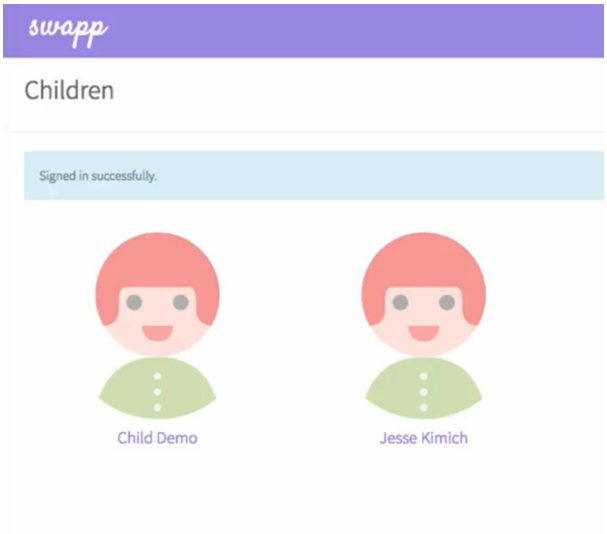
Hello!

We're scientists at Simon Fraser University and we're seeking caregivers and parents of children between the ages of 6 to 12 with neurodevelopmental disorders for a study on the utility and usability of a sleep software application.



The study will take about 1 hour to complete and we can come meet you at a location of your preference!

We will ask you some questions about your usage and preferences for the app, how user-friendly it was and if it was useful. You won't have to download anything, we will bring all the necessary technology.

To participate you must be fluent in written and spoken English and be open to interact with technologies including smart phones.

For more information or to book your appointment please email Emma Rodrigues at ean_rodrigues@sfu.ca.
